The race to scale payments and how RS2 payment solutions can support that growth

The race to scale payments

The Payment industry is a fast growing and dynamic industry and remains one of the brightest spots in the financial services industry.

Payments growth is increasing exponentially, and is predicted to reach $146bn¹ globally by 2030, with a CAGR of 13.3%. Due to the critical role payments plays in the economic landscape, the opportunity for growth for payment companies is enormous.

What's driving that growth?

- Continuing technology development towards supporting a fully digital economy
- Changes in the consumer behaviour increasing cashless payments
- Surge in smartphone and internet penetration globally
- Growth of emerging economies
- Increased support of regulatory bodies

What are the typical challenges facing payment companies on that journey?

Adapting to rapidly changing consumer behaviour and expectations

Achieving standardisation at scale

Winning market share quickly and holding onto competitive edge

Meeting regulatory requirements across multiple countries

Meeting security and privacy concerns

Embedding payments into business management solutions and supporting digitalization of the whole customer journey

What advantages deliver value for payments companies?

- Ability to quickly expand globally
- Offering of Value Added Services
- Integration with existing technologies

The right payment solution to support payment providers growth needs to support these criteria, however it's crucial that the challenges are tackled holistically and within the correct context, in order to ensure that growth is stable and robust.
